The Manhattan Athletic Club will follow in the New York Athletic Club's footsteps, it is said, and cease to pay the expenses of its bleyclists, barring the big four, Taylor, Bauker, Berlo and Windle.

Outside of these four, none of the M. A. C. bleyclists have brought much glory to the Cherry Diamond organization, so the latter sensibly concludes that the outlay is greater than the benefit derived. The plan does not meet with the unqualified approval of the other bleyclists, however, and one of the more prominent ones has already announced his determination to link his fortunes with some other club.
